Project Compass

NERCHE serves as the coordinator of Project Compass on behalf of the Nellie Mae Education Foundation, which has awarded funding to four public institutions of higher education in New England that have undertaken interventions to promote the success and retention of traditionally underserved populations of students. The participating campuses are Bridgewater State College, Eastern Connecticut State University, Lyndon State College, and the University of Maine at Presque Isle.

This is Year One of a four-year implementation cycle for Project Compass funding. The four grantees participated in a funded year of planning and a rigorous review of proposed interventions in order to be eligible for implementation funding. NERCHE, as the intermediary of the funder, designed a "learning community" structure to link the campuses in a collaborative network both within and among the participating institutions. Twice a year, NERCHE convenes the campus teams for a learning community meeting and provides ongoing technical assistance and coaching to the campus teams.

In November 2008, NERCHE brought together representatives of the four Project Compass campuses in Nashua, New Hampshire for a two-day learning community meeting. Featured presenter John Tagg, author of "The Learning Paradigm College," discussed critical research on how students learn and the implications for creating intentionally student-centered programs.

Campus teams engaged each other in a series of dialogues related to infusing culturally responsive and student-centered principles into institutional change efforts in areas such as advising, teaching, and faculty/professional development. Another discussion theme was the importance of "a culture of

Faculty and Professional Employee Workload Study

NERCHE has been selected by the CSU-AAUP to conduct an independent, comprehensive study of faculty and professional employee workloads within the Connecticut State University system. The research team is led by Dr. Jay Dee, Associate Professor in the Higher Education Doctoral Program at UMass Boston, and includes Dr. Glenn Gabbard, Associate Director, and Sharon Singleton, Senior Program and Research Associate, from NERCHE and Nancy M. Ludwig, Director of Institutional Research at Northeastern University.

This 16-month workload study will examine full-time and part-time CSU faculty workloads; workloads across academic departments and between graduate and undergraduate programs of study; policies and practices associated with teaching load adjustments; the relationship between faculty workloads (including opportunities for professional development) and practices that support student learning and retention; effects of workload on recruitment, retention, and career satisfaction of faculty; and workload issues for other academic professionals, including librarians, coaches, and counselors. In addition, NERCHE will conduct an analysis of the relationship between faculty workload and student outcomes reported in state accountability reports, as well as a longitudinal analysis of trends in faculty workload. The study's findings will be available in December 2009.

NERCHE Presents Lynton Award for the Scholarship of Engagement

On October 19, 2008, NERCHE awarded the Ernest A. Lynton Award for the Scholarship of Engagement to Michelle Dunlap from Connecticut College at the annual conference of the Coalition for Urban Metropolitan Universities (CUMU), which co-sponsors the Award. At the conference, Michelle, along with two of her students, Penney Jade Beaubrun and Christina Burrell, presented on their collaborative experiences with respect to courses, research projects, service, community engagement and other field experiences in a session entitled "Collaborative Learning, Serving, and Trailblazing in a Liberal Arts Environment."

Citations for Distinguished Engaged Scholarship went to Rose-Marie Chierici, associate professor of anthropology at SUNY-Geneseo, and Ann Feldman, associate professor of English at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

Higher Education and Democracy Project: Authors Meeting at the University of Pennsylvania

As part of larger project on Higher Education and the Future of Engagement (see www.futureofengagement.wordpress.com), ten authors met to continue their collaboration on a forthcoming book, Democratic Civic Engagement, edited by John Saltmarsh, NERCHE director, and Matthew Hartley, associate professor of education at the University of Pennsylvania. The meeting, hosted by the Netter Center for Community Partnerships at the University of Pennsylvania, took place on October 30-31, 2008.

NERCHE Hosts Two Leadership Speaker Events

As part of NERCHE's ongoing Leadership Speaker Series, Dr. Emile Netzhammer, III, Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs at Keene State College, delivered a presentation and led a discussion on "Developing a Culture of Reflection, Accountability, and Improvement" on October 24, 2008, at UMass Boston. Sponsored by NERCHE on behalf of the doctoral program in higher education administration at UMass Boston, the Speaker Series is an opportunity for doctoral program students, alumni, and faculty to meet in an informal environment with state, regional, and national leaders, acknowledged for their vision and ability to make substantive change in higher education.

Jacqueline Peterson, Vice-President of Student Affairs and Dean of Students at the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, MA, led the second Leadership Speaker event on Friday, November 21, 2008 with a presentation on "Leading Change in Student Affairs."

Think Tanks

Twenty years ago, NERCHE inaugurated its first Think Tanks for academics from colleges and universities across New England which were structured to provide time and space for members to reflect on their practice, learn from each other and from the literature, and speak frankly and confidentially about the challenges they face on their respective campuses.

Members are drawn from a diverse group of regional institutions and represent skilled leaders with a commitment to higher education and a willingness to engage contemporary challenges in higher education with thoughtfulness and creativity. NERCHE convenes Think Tanks for Chief Academic Officers, Academic Deans, Associate Academic Deans, Chief Student Affairs Officers, Multicultural Affairs Officers, and Chief Financial Officers.

NERCHE Hosts Planning Meeting to Explore the Creation of an Engaged Scholarship Think Tank

On November 19, 2008, more than 20 faculty members from multiple disciplines and from institutions across New England met at the College of the Holy Cross for a planning meeting to explore the establishment of an ongoing

Think Tank for Engaged Scholarship. As a way to model the NERCHE Think Tank structure, the morning was devoted to a discussion of a report from Imagining America, Scholarship in Public: Knowledge Creation and Tenure Policy in the Engaged University (2008). The meeting was coordinated and facilitated by David Scobey, Director of the Harvard Center for Community Partnerships at Bates College.

Corporation for National and Community Service Social Media and Civic Engagement Project

UMass Boston is partnering with CIRCLE (The Center for Information & Research on Civic Learning & Engagement) and the Tisch College of Citizenship and Public Service at Tufts University on a project using social media to increase and deepen youth civic engagement. The three-year project, administered by NERCHE, is funded with a grant from the Corporation for National and Community Service.

A leadership team of students in Asian American Studies is coordinating the project, which also involves faculty members Peter Kiang (Asian American Studies and Education), Shirley Tang (Asian American Studies and American Studies), and Sam Museus (Higher Education Doctoral Program).

Through the project, Asian American Studies will offer courses employing a community-based curriculum and community-mapping software to analyze community issues and networks.
